My Father's Legacy

shared by Lynlee Anderson Medhi

My father passed away in November of 2004 with his fight against cancer, a disease most of us are familiar with. Our family chooses to remember him by providing a small token to future generations in order to continue to stress the value and importance of the medical profession as we hope for a cure.

He left me with an inner strength, which I hope to pass onto my own children and that is to NEVER give up, he passionately told me every time I saw him during his last few months of his life on earth, that he was going to beat this (cancer) and "by golly" he did. He's no longer with us but his fighting spirit lives forever in my heart. He was and is truly an inspiration and a unique individual.

The most important thing in illness is never to lose heart. ~Nikolai Lenin
